

As the Nazi legions retreat, the climax of the great battle which began July 25 is drawing swiftly to a hand. American infantry broke through German lines between St. Lo and Periers then, holding at (Continued on Page Two).

Canadians are reported attacking strongly southeast of that town.

At least 5,500 sorties were flown by Allied warplanes Sunday and excellent weather prevailing today indicated that the Germans are getting another terrific aerial pounding.

American troops driving northward from Alencon toward a junction with British and Canadian forces advancing on Falaise were reported only 12 miles from that important communications center.

Allied troops entered the towns of Clair, Tizon and Donnay west of the Orne river.

South of St. Pierre La Vieille, the advance continued along the high ground on each side of the road to Conde-Su-Orne, while southeast of Vire more ground was gained in heavy fighting.

Farther to the south, in the Mortain sector, American doughboys closely pursued the retreating Nazis despite mines and long-range artillery fire.

Garrison Hangs On
Remnants of the German garrison are still holding out in the citadel of St. Malo on the Breton peninsula as the Allies press their attack on Dinard against strong enemy resistance.

There has been no change in the situation at the Nazi-held submarine base of Lorient on the bay of Biscay, according to Communiqué No. 128 from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's supreme headquarters.

Meanwhile, Allied heavy and medium bombers attacked highways and road junctions on both sides of the Seine river from Paris to the sea and westward toward the battered communications center of Lisieux and Rugles.

Medium bombers also hit rail bridges at Peronne, Beaufort, Doullens and Cherisy, rail facilities at Corbail and enemy gun positions in the Falaise area.

Among the targets blasted by the heavy bombers were a rail bridge over the Seine at Le Manoir, U-boat shelters at Brest, an oil storage depot for U-boats at Bordeaux and gun positions at St. Malo and the Ile de Cezembre.

Fourteen heavy bombers and two medium bombers failed to return from these operations.

Fighter planes, fighter-bombers and rocket-firing fighters continued to provide cover for the advancing ground forces by bombing and strafing Nazi tanks, motor transport, strongpoints and troop concentrations in the battle area.

Fighters also ranged over North-eastern and Central France, attacking locomotives, railway cars, motor transport and canal barges, while other fighters escorted the bombers in their missions.

Light bombers last night continued their attack on transport targets behind the enemy lines.

Russ Near Warsaw
On the eastern front Russian forces drove to within 11 miles of Warsaw and approached the vital Warsaw-Bialystok railroad northeast of the Polish capital. Near Warsaw Russian fighters seized Mostowka for their closest approach to the city.

To the northeast other Soviet elements took Lomza near the East Prussian border, and in the Baltic states, Russian fighters stormed into Vyru, west of Pskov and Madona, 70 miles from Riga.

A special announcement said that Soviet Baltic armies had slain more than 60,000 Germans between July 10 and August 10.

Political activity overshadowed military maneuvers in Italy where Premier Winston Churchill, Marshal Tito, and Dr. Ivan Subasitch were reported to have conferred with other high ranking Allied leaders.

On the Italian military front, ground action died out to routine patrol movement. In Florence, decreased sniper activity allowed Allied military government officials to rush medical supplies and water to the civil population of the newly freed city.

Plays Dead In Guam Shell Hole To Stay Alive

As he sat with three other wounded Yanks behind a table in the medical library of the U. S. Navy hospital in Hawaii, Marine Corp. Fred Hoffman, Jr., (right above) of Hoboken, N. J., told war correspondents how he stared up with dead, wide eyes from the bottom of a shell hole on Guam as blood drained out of his back, only clutching his .45 automatic a bit tighter when a Jap soldier reached down and poked him in the leg with his gun butt. The Jap moved away, and the corporal, after imitating a corpse for six hours, came back to tell the story. Seated with him above left to right are Pharmacist's Mate Second Class Warren A. Sunzeri of San Jose, Cal.; Boatswain's Mate First Class Norman F. Cook, of Portland, Ore., and Marine Pfc. Floyd L. Oller of Tulsa, Okla. Sunzeri and Cook were also wounded on Guam, while Oller was a casualty of the Tinian invasion. All four suffered arm injuries.

HUN FORCES IN FAST RETREAT

first only a 100-yard gap in Nazi lines. Bombers saturated the area, infantry moved in and seized the gap, and American tanks poured through to fan out in the German rear.

The tanks smashed through to Coutances, driving to form a trap for German defenders. That first trap swiftly became a larger one, set for all the Germans in Brittany, as the tanks raced for Brest, Nantes and Lorient and then swung eastward toward Le Mans.

Before the fall of Avranches the bulk of German strength opposed the British and Canadians near Caen. After Yank fighters took Avranches, the Nazis swung divisions toward that front.

But Allied planes paralyzed Nazi communications and transport made the German troops movement slow. Where the Nazis moved a division, we moved two. When the German all-out attacks came at Mortain, U. S. fighters beat them back with heavy losses to German armor.

This defeat rang the death knell for the Seventh Army in North-western France. With communications shattered, much of its armor lost, its morale cracking under the lightning American attacks and complete Allied aerial superiority, the Seventh became a badly battered army indeed.

As it retreats, Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's men, letter perfect at their jobs, and armed with the best arms and equipment in the world, press forward.

American staff officers give Nazi Gen. Guenther Von Kluge credit for not wanting to subject his Seventh Army to this beating.

POLICE SEEKING OWNER OF STRAY BLACK PIG
Circleville police Monday were seeking the owner of a black pig who has been a visitor at the police station for three or four days.

The porker was found by night policemen last week in the East end of the city and no one has claimed it. It is being kept in the yard at the rear of the police station.

Fines of $5 and costs were assessed by Mayor Ben Gordon when four persons were arraigned on disorderly conduct charges Saturday. Fined were Mrs. Dorothy Smith, Beulah Harrison, Mary Cockerham and Squire Smith Jr. They were arrested early Saturday by Patrolmen Marshall, Martin and Shasteen.

Kilgore Bill Sponsors To Press Issue

agencies will have much to do with determining the size of the budget.

"It is undoubtedly true that congress will strive to reduce taxes, especially those which act as a brake on production or business. These are taxes particularly like the 95 percent excess profits tax."

Congress also planned to speed action on surplus property disposal legislation. The house is scheduled to consider a bill tomorrow, while the senate military affairs committee will seek to whip a measure into shape during the week.

Democratic leaders were expected to seek quick action on emergency postwar legislation, and then postpone other major action until after the election.

Sen. Carl Hatch (D) N. M., said it was difficult to legislate on vitally important postwar problems during a campaign period. He said he thought the election would "cure the situation" in which southern Democrats combined with northern Republicans to crushingly defeat the Murray-Kilgore bill in the senate.

"I think that after the election considerations which have entered into debate during the last two years will be out of the way and both senate and house can settle down to these postwar problems," he said. "Legislation now being passed will have to be greatly expanded."

Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg (R) Mich., said the next major problem of congress in the postwar field is "to create a rational cooperative system between the federal government and the states in respect to postwar public works, which can be used to take up a temporary lag in employment, if there is one."

A major question of policy to be settled in legislation on disposition of surplus war property is whether to "lock it up" for a period of years so as not to interfere with business, or whether to make it available to the people and put the proceeds in the federal treasury to help cut the war debt.

Sen. Johnson (D) Col., was leading a fight to "padlock" supplies for a five-year period.

IRA AMSPAUGH JAILED

DEWEY DRAFTS VOTE APPEALS FOR CAMPAIGN

PAWLING, Aug. 14 — Gov. Thomas E. Dewey left his Quaker Hill farm for Albany today, taking with him the preliminary drafts for several campaign speeches.

The Republican nominee, except for a round of golf yesterday with three neighbors, devoted the entire week end to work on his campaign talks.

Gov. Dewey is expected to deliver his initial speech soon after Labor Day and it is believed he will make at least four fairly extensive tours during the campaign, including one to the west coast, one to the New England states, one into the middle west and another into the border states.

The governor has a comparatively quiet week ahead of him, as far as out-of-state callers are concerned.

In fact, the ambassador said, the British are preparing to make their full impact on Japan as soon as the European war is over. He revealed that some English factories are already switching over to produce materials for the Pacific war, such as sun helmets and tropical clothing.

But the British government is not willing to make further sacrifices in the interest of Washington's policy against Argentina. The ambassador made this clear in re-ign affairs.

KISS SO TORRID SHE TURNS IN ALARM OF FIRE

CHICAGO, Aug. 14—A kiss so torrid it brought out the fire department challenged all existing osculatory records today.

Police, after they had arrested Margaret Mayhood, 41, and charged her with disorderly conduct said that this was what happened:

As Margaret and a man she named as Herbert Clark were sitting in a tavern, Herbert planted such a sizzling kiss on Margaret's lips that she straightway ran across the street to a fire alarm box and pulled the lever.

Herbert got away from there in a hurry, but Margaret was waiting in the middle of the street when the fire department 2nd battalion and 15 pieces of equipment screamed to the scene.

"I know I was wrong," Margaret explained, "but I got so excited."

Now they're looking for Herbert.

WEST CHICAGO LOSES RESPECT FOR CRICKETS

CHICAGO, Aug. 14—Residents of Chicago's western suburbs reported today a heavy infestation of crickets which disabused them of the high opinion they had of the insect from reading its descriptions in pastoral prose and poetry.

They would not mind a chirp or two occasionally, they said, but when the vast ensemble really gets going with its shrill and creaking chorus one just cannot sleep.

Irvin Johnson, horticulturalist at Garfield park, and other experts were able to offer them no hope of relief until the prolonged hot, dry spell abates.

sponse to a question of the desirability of cutting off purchases of Argentine meat, as a form of sanction against that "Fascist" country. He said:

"If you think the British people, who have been limited in their rations, would not wish to be further limited—I think you are correctly informed."

Halifax returned to Washington Saturday. He was accompanied by the British delegation to the International Security Conference, headed by Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent undersecretary of foreign affairs.

Cadogan sat beside Halifax at the embassy press conference. He revealed that the British and American governments already have come to virtual agreement for a postwar organization which will be a League of Nations in a new form.

Cadogan was asked if the American outline of the new organization, as presented by President Roosevelt on June 15, met with British approval. He said:

"There is nothing in that outline to which we would wish to take exception."

It was clear from his account of the Anglo-American exchange views, beginning with the London visit of U. S. Undersecretary of State Stettinius last Spring, that these two governments are far ahead of the other two members of the "Big Four"—Russia and China.

Cadogan said he had just learned Sunday morning that the Soviet government has produced a plan.

Graham Netting, curator of herpetology at the Carnegie Museum, has probably developed and given to servicemen the world's smallest snake bite kit—a set of directions and a sterilized and wax-dipped razor blade. Netting has given these kits free to men in more than 24 army camps. In one southern camp, he explained, the kits have become an unofficial part of the soldiers' equipment.

LE MANS

THE old A. E. F. routes are being retold. Cherbourg in the last war saw many American soldiers arrive, St. Nazaire, and above all Brest, even more. Now Le Mans is in the line of the American advance, safely held, with all the great network of railways and highways centering in it.

Le Mans was a great American replacement camp in the last war. All through that area soldiers flocked to Le Mans when relieved from duty, and relieved their homesickness by sight of American locomotives and freight cars, towering above the diminutive but effective French rolling stock.

Tours will come into the news before long. That is still remembered as behind the lines headquarters of the Service of Supply, which evoked the quip, "Mother take down your service flag. Your son's in the S. O. S."

One by one the old names recur.

RIGHTS

WHAT are rights, and should people have them?

The Bill of Rights, according to William Feather, a business man who philosophically observes the every-day scene, includes "the right to drop used chewing gum anywhere, the right to deface the walls of washrooms, the right to disturb others by loud chatter in the theatre, the right to occupy a busy telephone booth as long as one pleases, the right to muscle into the front end of a queue, and the right to block the view of 300 people during an exciting play in any sports event."

So many really legitimate rights have been lost in Axis-governed countries that a lot of people are confused as to what are rights, and what not.

There is, for instance, the right to be courteous. Once upon a time the word meant having the gentleness and good manners of people attached to the court of kings. But every American citizen, being a king in his own right, has also this inalienable right to be gentle and kindly towards his fellow men. Why not hold on to that one as well as to those somewhat less pleasant?

RETALIATION

THE destruction brought by the robot bombs seems to have roused new enthusiasm in Germany. When a country is blasted by war, it is natural to feel a momentary pleasure at retaliation.

But even in Naziland retaliation does not last. Chalked on the walls and buildings in Hanover was the inscription, "Now that they are drafting even Grandma, Is that what they mean by retaliation?"

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — The late General Wladislaw Sikorski, Premier of Poland, who favored cooperation with Russia, had a faithful aide and secretary, Hieronim Rettinger, who accompanied Sikorski almost everywhere. However, fate ruled that he was not with the Polish Premier during the latter's fatal plane crash.

After Sikorski was killed, Rettinger was not happy over the trend of Polish affairs. Finally, he went to Premier Mikolajczyk, told him he wanted to leave the Polish Government-in-Exile and return to Poland to help the underground. Mikolajczyk was sympathetic but asked how Rettinger expected to return.

"I can return by parachute," was the reply.

"But you're too old for that," argued Mikolajczyk. "That's a hazard only for young men."

Rettinger countered that he was 57 and plenty young enough to take a parachute jump for the sake of his homeland.

Finally, the Polish Premier yielded to the point of advising Rettinger to go up to Scotland and take two or three practice jumps in order to be ready for the big jump over Poland. But Rettinger replied: "No, after the first jump, I would desert and run away to London. At my age, I have one jump in me. I can jump from a plane over Poland, but that is all. No practice jumps in Scotland."

So finally, last February, Rettinger did jump over Poland and did join the Polish underground.

The amazing thing, however, is that, when Premier Mikolajczyk recently left on his all-important mission to Moscow, Polish officials managed to get word to Rettinger inside Poland via the underground; also managed to get him out of Poland and bring him to Cairo.

In Cairo, Rettinger met Premier Mikolajczyk and had a very important conference, during which he gave a first-hand report regarding the sentiment of the Polish people toward Russia, the status of their resistance, and other information needed by the Premier for his conference with Stalin.

DEWEY'S WHITE HOUSE FRIEND

Best friend Governor Dewey has inside or around the White House today is not Bernie Baruch, who tries to win friends for Dewey, nor even Fred Eearls, Jr., ex-aide to Justice Byrnes, who contributed $2,000 to the Dewey campaign. Actually, Dewey's best White House friend, in the opinion of other Presidential advisers, is General "Pa" Watson, FDR's own closest secretary.

Pa is not for Dewey, but he is accused of playing into Dewey's hands by needing the President against Wendell Willkie.

Other White House intimates have been reminding the President how Willkie went down the line for him on taxes, on foreign policy and on every phase of the war, say that he could swing a million or so votes if he were brought closer to the White House. But their work is undone by genial Pa Watson, the man who sees the President most, who privately considers Willkie a liberal not to be trusted, and who doesn't hesitate to give the President his views.

every year in late August by about 10 to 15 per cent of American citizens when the ragweed pollen begins to drop out of the sky, sowing hay fever, sneezing, watery eyes and asthma in its wake. Fairly akin, I am happy to say, the feeling is, but still distinctly annoying and uncomfortable and inconvenient.

There is another hay fever season in the spring due to the trees and the grasses, and a certain small proportion of the population are sensitive to some plants all the year around. But our worst and most annoying hay fever plant is the ragweed. In the west, south-west and Pacific Coast regions, sisters of the ragweed—sage, burweed, etc.—cause hay fever, but they do not pollinate nearly as abundantly nor are as many of the population susceptible to them.

Valuable Data

In the intensive study of this enemy which has been carried on scientifically for about a quarter of a century a number of valuable data have accumulated. First, the old-time hayfeverite's idea that some years are worse than others has been abundantly proved. Measurements of the actual depth of the fall of pollen have shown that since 1920 the best years for humans, the lightest fall of pollen, occurred in 1930 and 1936. The worst recorded year was 1939, when four and a half times as much pollen fell as in 1930, 1943 was medium average, 1944 remains to be seen.

The season lasts approximately from the 15th of August to the 25th of September. Carefully measured pollen falls in many cities indicate the height of the season is from about the 25th of August to the 10th of September. In most places the peak occurs on August 30th, when the unit measurement reaches 1,500 as compared to 50 on August 15th and September 15th. If you are a hayfeverite and can get a month's vacation, take it between those latter dates; if you can get only two weeks' vacation, take it from August 25th to September 10th.

Geographical distribution is now also a matter of exact record. The fellow who likes to boast that in his climate he has to stand more hay fever than anybody else can now be checked. The champion is the denizen of Indianapolis. That is the plague spot, with St. Louis, Buffalo, Omaha, Milwaukee and my own native Kansas City not far behind.

Averages in Different Locations

If you took the amount of pollen that falls in Indianapolis to be represented by an object the size of a grapefruit, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Buffalo, etc., the size of a large orange; Detroit, Louisville, Oklahoma City, and Memphis the size of a lemon; Pittsburgh, Minneapolis and Houston and Atlanta the size of a plum, you get an overall picture. New York, Philadelphia and Washington stack up on this scale about the size of a walnut; Boston and Toronto the size of a grape and Los Angeles, San Francisco, Reno, Portland and Seattle the size of a grain of rice. Around the Northern shores of the Great Lakes it varies with the wind direction on different days, but never gets larger than the grain of rice stage. Any mountain region is comparatively free.

This geographical distribution indicates where the hayfeverite should go on his vacation, and also why, for instance, the allergists of the Pacific Coast and Boston report so much better results from their pre-seasonal pollen vaccines. In treatment, vacation (removal to ragweed-free districts) and air filtered and air conditioned rooms are the best. Other forms of treatment we will discuss tomorrow.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Matthew said irritably, "We've been quiet enough ever since we were married because of your mourning. I thought, in a few months, we'd have a little more fun."

"Hasn't it been fun?" she asked, her eyes intent.

"Yes, naturally. But confound it!" he said, "you're young, you're lovely, I want to take you places, show you off—I—"

Judith interrupted, "As if I were a new car or a new toy?"

"Don't be idiotic," he frowned, "that isn't like you. Sounds like a bad play."

She said, "You spoke about plenty of time. Well, there's always time for that sort of thing, Matthew."

"If you have a baby, that means more months of—staying home, being quiet—" He broke off and she saw the shadow in his eyes. She thought: He hates my being ill, even the thought of it. I suppose that's natural, not only because he loves me but because he's with people who are ill all day long and sometimes half the night. But he's thinking of Irene too and how she died, before she could have her baby....

Judith was not disturbed, because of this. She was filled with pity for him, with pity for the unfulfilled ghost, gentle and effacing, which had once been a living woman and his wife.

Matthew said, "I won't have it. I told you how I felt about it and that's that. I simply won't have it."

"Very well." She turned to adjust her little hat before the mirror. "Let's go, shall we? We're late as it is... but we can see one of the features."

At the door Matthew caught her hand against him. He declared, "If anything ever happened to you—"

"Nothing could," Judith said serenely. "Don't worry so. And the best thing that could happen to me," she added, "would be to have your child."

"You get your own way too much. But not this time... Mrs. Norman," he told her.

During the late spring, Mary took a small house at Easthampton and suggested that Judith and Matthew consider it their own... "until you have one," she added.

She and Judith had been looking for a little place near New York, one within commuting distance where, when Matthew was free, they could spend weekends, but as yet they had found nothing suitable.

"We'll have to build," decided Matthew, "although where, I wouldn't know. But with things as they are it isn't a bad idea, financially speaking, to own the roof over your head and the ground under your feet. I talked to Lynn Mortimer about it and he agreed with me. Of course, I couldn't be there much, except possibly summers, when work is slackest. But it would be fun."

"How about a tent or a trailer?" Judith wanted to know. "It wouldn't matter what or where as long as we were together, would it?"

He said, "That's the gypsy in you. Me, I like my comfort."

Since that spring evening when he had expressed himself forcibly on the subject of a child, Judith had never mentioned it again. She could not talk about it, even to Mary, but once when they were lunching together Elizabeth said, "Peter's in line for a better job. When he gets it, if he does, I'll stop working and have a baby." She looked gravely at Judith. Elizabeth added, "Women are so foolish not to... if they can. It's so—so unfulfilling, otherwise."

Judith asserted, "I know," soberly.

Elizabeth had a moment of clairvoyance: It's Matthew, she thought, exasperated, and no one in the world would have the temerity to point out to him what a mistake he is making.

Aloud, she said, "Judith, you won't like hearing this and I don't like saying it but, it seems to me, Matthew's attitude toward me has definitely changed."

"How?" asked Judith cautiously. "I can't put my finger on it," Elizabeth said slowly, "but there's something... I don't think he likes our out-of-office-house association."

"Nonsense!" protested Judith vigorously, "why shouldn't he?"

"I don't know, but that's the way he is," Matthew's office nurse answered. She sighed. "I've liked being with you so much. But I wouldn't for worlds help create a situation. And also, on the frank and brutal side, I must not jeopardize my job... I can't afford to."

Judith said, after a moment, "You're trying to tell me—"

"You know," Elizabeth interrupted, "without my telling you."

"But that's absurd," Judith told her, flushed.

"Yet you haven't really denied it," said Elizabeth shrewdly, "you're far too honest. You can't sit there over your skippy salad and say with any conviction that Matthew likes to have his office nurse and his wife lunch together once a week or so, or spend Sunday together, or make a foursome for dinner at each other's houses."

"Matthew," asserted Judith, "has some very odd ideas. I don't subscribe to them. And I don't intend to have him dictate to me about my friends."

"I'll miss you," said Elizabeth serenely, "but that's that. There's no use making matters worse. We're friends, and that remains. But if Matthew believes it wise to run his office quite separately from his home, and never the twain shall meet and all that sort of thing, it is best, I believe, to give in gracefully. I don't suppose he'd really make an issue of it, yet he could make me very uncomfortable," she said thoughtfully. "I don't like being uncomfortable."

Judith protested, "You're wrong—I—"

"You hadn't your usual conviction when you said that," Elizabeth told her. "Don't look so distressed, Judith. One of these days I'll retire into my little flat and become a good housekeeper and a martinet of a mother, and then things will be different. But I cannot," she went on, trying to smile, "bite the hand which, at present, feeds me. You may think I put a job above friendship. I do, in one sense. Yet I put your happiness above that."

Matthew getting his way again. Judith told him so that night. She asked, with spirit, "What have you been saying to Elizabeth—about me, that is?"

"Nothing," said Matthew, and remarked that the steak was overdone.

Judith refrained from replying that he had been later than he expected for dinner and had not telephoned. "There must be something, I saw her today," she persisted.

He shook his dark head. "It's your imagination. Aren't Sam and Hilda coming in for contract, darling? That's good. I hope I'm not called out, I've had a pretty tough day, and I'm dog tired."

She said, "I'll call the party off if you like, and you can go to bed early. You know you never do when they are here. You sit up and talk until all hours after the last rubber."

"For Pete's sake!" he declared, "don't do that! It relaxes me."

Judith thought: Well, that's that. I can't select my own friends or even my own time in which to have a baby. And he won't talk about it. That's the most maddening thing of all.

Matthew wouldn't. Yet later in the summer he said casually, "I knew it would work out better if you didn't see so much of Elizabeth socially."

"How do you mean, 'work out'?" asked Judith. "And by the way, it was her doing, not mine."

"It was?" His brows drew together for a moment, then his face cleared. "Well, she had more sense than I. It doesn't mix, I tell you. I've proved it too, I think. You have a hundred friends," he said carelessly, and added smiling, "which has been very good for business."

Judith said after a moment, "I haven't recommended you—Dr. Norman—if that's what you mean."

"Very reprehensible," her husband told her, unruffled. "It's part of your job."

She said, after a moment, "And you see these friends of mine professionally... Some of them socially, now that we're going out more, accepting my invitations. That doesn't seem to hamper you."

He looked at her with the utmost astonishment. "It's quite different," he protested.

"How?"

"Elizabeth," he explained shortly, "is an employee." He looked at her, puzzled.

His wife asked, "Matthew, must you always have your way?"

"It's my way if it doesn't happen to be yours? How like a woman," he told her.

"That's logical enough," Judith retorted. She added, "I always thought you were spoiled."

"Who spoiled me?"

"Your mother, first of all." She paused a moment, added briefly, "And, of course, Irene."

He said, "You're crazy. I've always stood on my own feet. No woman has had any influence—except you," he added, smiling at her, "and you have altogether too much."

Judith thought: Yes, of course. I could fight this Elizabeth thing to the finish with you, and win. And the other, the more important, too. I'd use my one sure weapon...

STARS SAY—

For Monday, August 14

Monday's astrological forecast is a conflicting one, with several contradictory situations. There is fair promise of progress and success, if certain precautions regarding treachery are followed. Subtle as well as sinister and malevolent matters may undermine. With care there might be lasting benefits, with firm foundation for future security, but be wise to mistaken judgments and intrigues.

Those whose birthday it is may have several matters to adjust during the year, prior to enduring and worthwhile benefits and progress. Intrigues, snares, underhand menaces in both private and business life, should be shrewdly disposed of. Public or group recognition, with romantic and financial rewards may result.

A child born on this day should have sturdy qualities and talents, although it may be easily duped or deceived. With care and prudence it may reap substantial success.

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAYBE NOT IMPOSSIBLE NO MATTER how impossible of fulfillment a contract may appear, you can usually think of some very improbable arrangement of the hidden cards which would enable you to pull through if it existed. The plucky campaigner has a habit of trying to imagine such arrangements when he finds himself up against it, and then playing so as to cash in on them in case luck is with him.

Pushed into grand slam by his Blackwooding partner, he had to take every trick despite the fact that five trumps to the Q-J-10-9 were out against him. Preventing loss of a trick to that combination seems impossible, but he found a way to do it.

After West led the diamond 6, he saw a remote chance that the man at the left would have six hearts and the one at his right a singleton, that the right-hand man would ruff the second heart lead with the spade 4 and that the other four trumps would be divided. All of these developed.

He won the lead with the diamond 10, scored the heart A and led the K. East ruffed with the spade 4, was over-ruffed with the 7, and two rounds of trumps drew the other four spades. The rest was a cinch.

Bits on Books

By Enid Denham

Today in our mail, from the Ohio State University Library, we received an interesting booklet, a supplementary catalogue of the Circleville Public Library 1892-1895 as compiled by Miss May Lowe, former librarian of Circleville Public Library. There were at that time two librarians, the other being Mrs. Lella Fitzpatrick. In a foreword to the catalogue, they report that within three years of the library's history 42,423 volumes have been given out for home use, little more than 14,000 a year. There were too 2,270 "visits" to the periodical room. For membership during the three years, remember, there were "Boys 143, Girls 199, Adult Males 185, Adult Females 441." Almost 50 years ago! On the list are 46 book titles by Oliver Optic, ignored today, 27 titles of Horatio Alger, with such names as "Risen from the Ranks," "Shifting for Himself" and "Tattered Tom." Today these names are little known, the books are seldom, if ever, read, but how many even remember Harry Castlemon, or any of his works? We numbered 16 at that time.

There were some excellent books of history then just as there are today, but the subject matter was handicapped by the small size of the print, by the lack of pictures or understanding interpretation. The personal narrative done in journalistic style as used by the modern foreign correspondent was almost unknown.

Today in our report of six-months' activities at the library, we find that history accounts for over 3,000 of readers' selections. Since we now have unlimited circulation of non-current magazines, 750 have been withdrawn for home use. We cannot record how many "visits" our periodical room, for recent magazines are shelved within easy reach of all, our bound magazines are on open shelves.

In order that we might have more time for readers advisory service we have made the mechanical processes involved in checking books in and out as simple as possible.

We have gathered together material for Monday Club speakers, have prepared biographies, have helped students with their college papers, have hunted up suitable recent magazine articles for one Rotary speaker and a Child Conservation League speaker. We have also made three bibliographies for those "I want to read some good recent books" who have just returned to reading as a hobby.

During the past six months, there have been adult displays of the "Headline Pamphlets," special displays for China and Russia Book Weeks, selected reading lists, displays on War and Military Service, Farms and Rural Life, a list entitled — and "In the Early Spring" comprising garden books and Lenten reading, books on vegetable and food gardening with a market basket of potential crops, selected Cookery Books, Useful Arts—special planned for refurbishing the home, books pertaining to Latin America, Sports, Recreation and Hobbies. In addition to these reader helps, you have each week a column with descriptive and critical notes on recently received books.

There have been registered during the January-June period, 521 new and renewed memberships, with those in the county still holding the ratio of one in five. Our library has grown in the 50 years from 7,000 to 37,321 with the emphasis on quality rather than quantity. We believe a book should be read.

RED BIRDS HANG ON TO FOURTH; SPLIT TWIN BILL

By International News Service

The Milwaukee Brewers and the Toledo Mud Hens, rated first and third, respectively, in the American Association pennant race today, split about everything Sunday—including whatever friendship might have existed between the two teams after the Mud Hens five straight killings over the Brewers recently.

Playing in Toledo before 8,508 fans, the two clubs broke even in a doubleheader attraction with Owen Scheetz pitching the league leaders to an easy 10-2 triumph in the opening game and Walter Brown winning the seven-inning nightcap for Toledo, 7-2.

Pitcher Bill Seimoth of the Mud Hens and Hal Peck, hard-hitting Milwaukee right fielder, were evicted from the first game at the start of the seventh inning, after they traded blows in a fracas which involved most of both teams.

Second Sacker Tom Nelson batted in five of Milwaukee's runs in the opening game with three hits, including a home run. He also smashed a circuit clout in the afterpiece. Babe Martin, of Toledo, also homered in the second event.

Down in Louisville the Colonels' Mel Deutsch and St. Paul's Ernie Rudolph engaged in a tight pitching battle finally decided by a bad-hop single in the sixth which enabled the Saints to win, 1-0.

Deutsch gave up only three hits to four yielded by Rudolph. Two of the hits off Deutsch, though, came in the decisive sixth stanza. The second game of the scheduled doubleheader was rained out.

Columbus barely managed to hang on to its first division fourth place in halving its twin engagement with the lowly Kansas City Blues. The Blues tallied a single run in their half of the ninth inning of the first game to tie the contest at 3-all and from there went on to win 4-3 in the tenth.

Glenn Crawford drove in all three of Columbus' runs in the first game with two homers. Tom Ananiez, making his first appearance in Columbus as a Red Bird pitcher, allowed 10 hits, but he and his mates clubbed Bill Davis and Dick Hearn for 13 safeties. One of those 13 blows was an inside-the-park homer by Ananiez.

Indianapolis inaugurated its last long home stand of the season by thumping Minneapolis twice, 7-6 and 7-1.

TALBERT AND BROUGH CAPTURE TENNIS TITLE

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 14—Bill Talbert of Indianapolis and Louise Brough of Beverly Hills were singles champions today in the eastern grass courts meet after swinging to respective victories in straight sets.

Talbert upset the favored Pancho Segura, defending champion from Ecuador, 9-7, 6-4, 6-4, while Miss Brough downed national champion Pauline Betz of Los Angeles 6-3, 6-1. Talbert and Segura teamed to cop the doubles laurels and Miss Brough paired with Margaret Osborne of San Francisco to capture the women's doubles.

DE LA CRUZ ARMY BOUND
CINCINNATI, Aug. 14—Tomás de la Cruz, the Cincinnati Reds' Cuban pitcher, will leave the Reds Friday to return to Havana for induction into his country's army. His departure will leave the Reds with only six pitchers.

RHYAN IS CHAMP
COLUMBUS, Aug. 14—Dick Rhyans was Columbus' new Public Rhyans golf champion today. He won over Bill Mawhiner, 6 and 5, in the 36-hole final.

TWO SOFTBALL GAMES SLATED MONDAY NIGHT

Louise Erickson stars as Judy, with Dix Davis as Randolph.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

Alice Frost, the "Mr. and Mrs. North" star is beginning to wonder if the show's writers are looking to her for inspiration. The other night, she bumped her head, getting into her automobile. Next day, she reported for a rehearsal, and found that the script called for her to be knocked out by a blow on the head!

Hair-banked Ish Kabibble, frozen-faced comedian of the Kay Kyser "College of Musical Knowledge" airshow, has checked in at Columbia Pictures to appear in one of the "Screen Snapshots" shorts. The story concerns a WAVE, a WAC and a lady Marine being shown the Hollywood sights by the popular Kyser comedian.

Agnes Moorehead and Ray Collins, of the screen, will co-star in the new Lucille Fletcher mystery, "The Diary of Saphronia Winters," on the "Suspense" broadcast Thursday.

Radio's "Arkansas Traveler," Bob Burns, has returned to Hollywood from a tour of service hospitals and camps in the southwest. Bob announces he will make at least one more tour of hospitals before his airshow returns to the airwaves following its Summer vacation.

Each week brings Wilfred Pelletier, co-star with his soprano wife Rose Hampton on "Vacation Serenade," a dozen or more letters from the battle zones written by young singers who have auditioned with him. Having two sons of his own in the army, "Pelly" knows how eagerly answers are awaited, and a week is the deadline on each answer.

Superintendent, Seven High School And Two Grade Instructors Needed

With opening of the 1944-45 school year in Pickaway county three weeks away school boards are anxiously searching for one superintendent, seven high school teachers and two elementary teachers, County Superintendent George D. McDowell said Monday.

Schools in all the Pickaway districts will open Tuesday, Sept. 5, the day after Labor Day, Superintendent McDowell said, in announcing the calendar for the school year.

Eight vacancies were filled last week and boards hope to sign more instructors soon, he reported. Teachers hired last week were Mrs. Medrith Hott of Mt. Sterling to teach the first grade at Darby township; Miss Mary Parks, sixth, seventh and eighth grade principal and Miss Marjorie Houck, third, fourth and fifth grades, Harrison township school at Duval; Mrs. Mary Wittick, Mt. Joseph J. Horst, former Circleville high school teacher, was employed as superintendent of Deer Creek township school. Mr. Horst was assistant principal last season at Shelby, Ohio, and taught at Washington C. H. after he left Circleville in 1942. He has had wide experience in business in addition to his teaching experience. He holds B. Sc. and M. A. degrees from Ohio State university.

The only two grade vacancies are in the Tarlton school. First event on the school calendar is the first superintendents' meeting of the year, set for Saturday, Sept. 2. First holiday will be Oct. 26, 27 if the Central Ohio Teachers association meeting, scheduled for those dates, is held. Other holiday dates are Thanksgiving vacation Nov. 30 and Dec. 1; Christmas vacation Dec. 22 to Jan. 2; Feb. 22, Washington's birthday.

HOUSE SHORTAGE HAS EFFECT ON SCHOOL SYSTEM

Housing facilities which are inadequate in Circleville also are reaching a critical stage in Pickaway county.

Shortage of rental houses in the city and county have complicated the already complex problem of obtaining enough teachers to adequately staff the schools. Several teachers with families have hesitated before accepting positions and in some instances have refused to accept offers because there was no assurance residences could be found.

Rooms and small apartments are available in most areas but families with children are having difficulty locating homes.

FIREMEN HOPE RAIN WILL END GRASS BLAZES

City firemen Monday were hoping Sunday's rain would slow up the epidemic of grass fires which has kept them busy the last few days.

After receiving four calls Friday firemen answered four more calls Saturday afternoon and evening. They were called to Bell Siding along the N. and W. railroad and the Liston farm on Route 23 north. Later in the afternoon a grass fire got out of control and burned into the Barnes Lumber yard at Pickaway and Ohio streets. Small damage was done to the lumber. Saturday night firemen were called to the Bennett farm, about seven miles west of the city on Route 22.

it will not be Pa Watson's fault.

Meanwhile, the Dewey camp is still sending all sorts of ambassadors of good will to Willkie, trying to win him over to support for the Republican ticket. Latest report is that Willkie can be Secretary of State if he joins up. So far, he hasn't budged; but if Pa Watson keeps on, he may.

When they got through counting the ballots for and against isolationist Senator Gerald Nye in North Dakota's Republican primary, they found that it was one intensely pro-German district, McIntosh county, which put him across.

McIntosh county is largely controlled by the Wishek family, plus other Germans who have kept strong sympathies with the fatherland. The county voted almost solidly for Nye—with one unique exception—giving him a 1,368 margin.

At the last minute, election authorities almost held up the county's vote on the ground that no auditor's election seal had been placed on the abstract of votes. Had the 1,368 votes finally been thrown out, Nye's leading competitor, Lynn Stambaugh, would have won, since he trailed Nye by only 972 votes in the over-all state tally.

UNIQUE EXCEPTION

Unique exception to Nye's sweep of McIntosh county was the fact that Congressman Usher Burdick, who ran a close third, carried the town of Wishek, the county seat. Here is the untold story of how he did it.

Driving through this German stronghold, Burdick decided that he didn't have a chance, but that he would at least see what the people were talking and thinking about. So he dropped in at a tavern where several Germans were drinking beer.

Without introducing himself, Burdick got to talking with them, bought them some sausage, and got into a game of rummy. The game lasted most of the afternoon. Finally, one of the Germans said: "Aren't you Congressman Burdick?"

"Yes," Burdick replied. "But that doesn't make any difference. I know you are all against me

When the election returns were counted, Burdick, a forthright anti-Nazi and anti-isolationist, had carried Wishek against Nye.

Note—Republican Congressman Burdick is being urged by friends to run as an independent against Nye in November.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

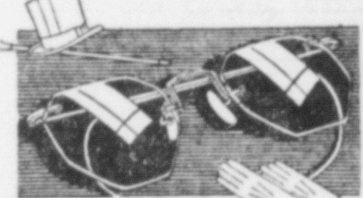

Texas is a big state but, under Jesse Jones, the Civil Aeronautics Administration has awarded more airport contracts to Texas than to any other state except Florida. . . . RKO has been distributing the generally considered pro-Fascist film "Goyescas" in South America. The star is Imperio Argentina, who has been featured in various Nazi productions and whose old films were barred from South America for several years. . . . Two lengthy books were discovered missing from the Russian War Relief display on Russian agriculture some time ago. Vice President Wallace finally fessed up that he had borrowed them to study in preparation for his trip to Siberia. They were written in Russian. . . . J. Fred Odom, new head of the local Democrats in Louisiana, was the district attorney who investigated the murder of Huey Long. Many critics will wonder why Odom never held an autopsy on Huey's body, also why he did not investigate more thoroughly the dozens of bullet holes in the body of Carl Weiss, the assassin. . . . Big oil man Colonel T. H. Barton, who ran against Hattie Caraway in Arkansas, is an old friend of ex-Vice President Charlie Dawes.

LUMBER SCRAP GIVES DATA ON OLD BUILDING

A perfectly preserved piece of lumber which reveals a bit of the history of the old building formerly used by the Circleville Athletic Club has been uncovered by workmen engaged in razing the old residence.

N. E. Clifton, East Ohio street, a carpenter on the job, found the board in one of the walls of the building. Written in pencil on the board was the information that James Pedrick was the contractor on the job of erecting the building. It also contained the names of Yosiab Pedrick and Levi Hammel, journeymen. The board had this inscription on it:

"This work put up by Yosiab Pedrick and Levi Hammel, March 2d, 1871. Raining all day. Fine growing weather."
